ABOUT

I turn scattered ideas into visual systems teams can actually use.

IDENTITY

Clear marks, strong language, and scalable behavior — built so a team can run without me.

SYSTEMS

Type, color, and rules that survive real production.

EXECUTION

From strategy through digital, print, merch, packaging, and environment.

THE CHALLANGE

How do you craft a French–American fusion identity that avoids predictable cultural mashups and instead communicates refinement, modernity, and a sense of place? The challenge is expressing dual heritage without leaning on overused motifs, while still making the fusion instantly legible across signage, packaging, and merchandise.

THE APPROACH

Build a visual language rooted in symbolic convergence rather than cliché: a single emblem that merges Liberty and Eiffel architecture into a unified silhouette, supported by a muted sage-and-earth palette that feels contemporary rather than thematic. The system prioritizes restraint and modularity, allowing the identity to scale from storefront to apparel while maintaining a calm, elevated fusion aesthetic.

PROCESS

The mark was built, not assembled.

Statue of Liberty and Eiffel tower start out as sketches and silhouettes, then fuse. The final vector is a single united silhouette.
French structure, American figure - used as a system, not a decoration.

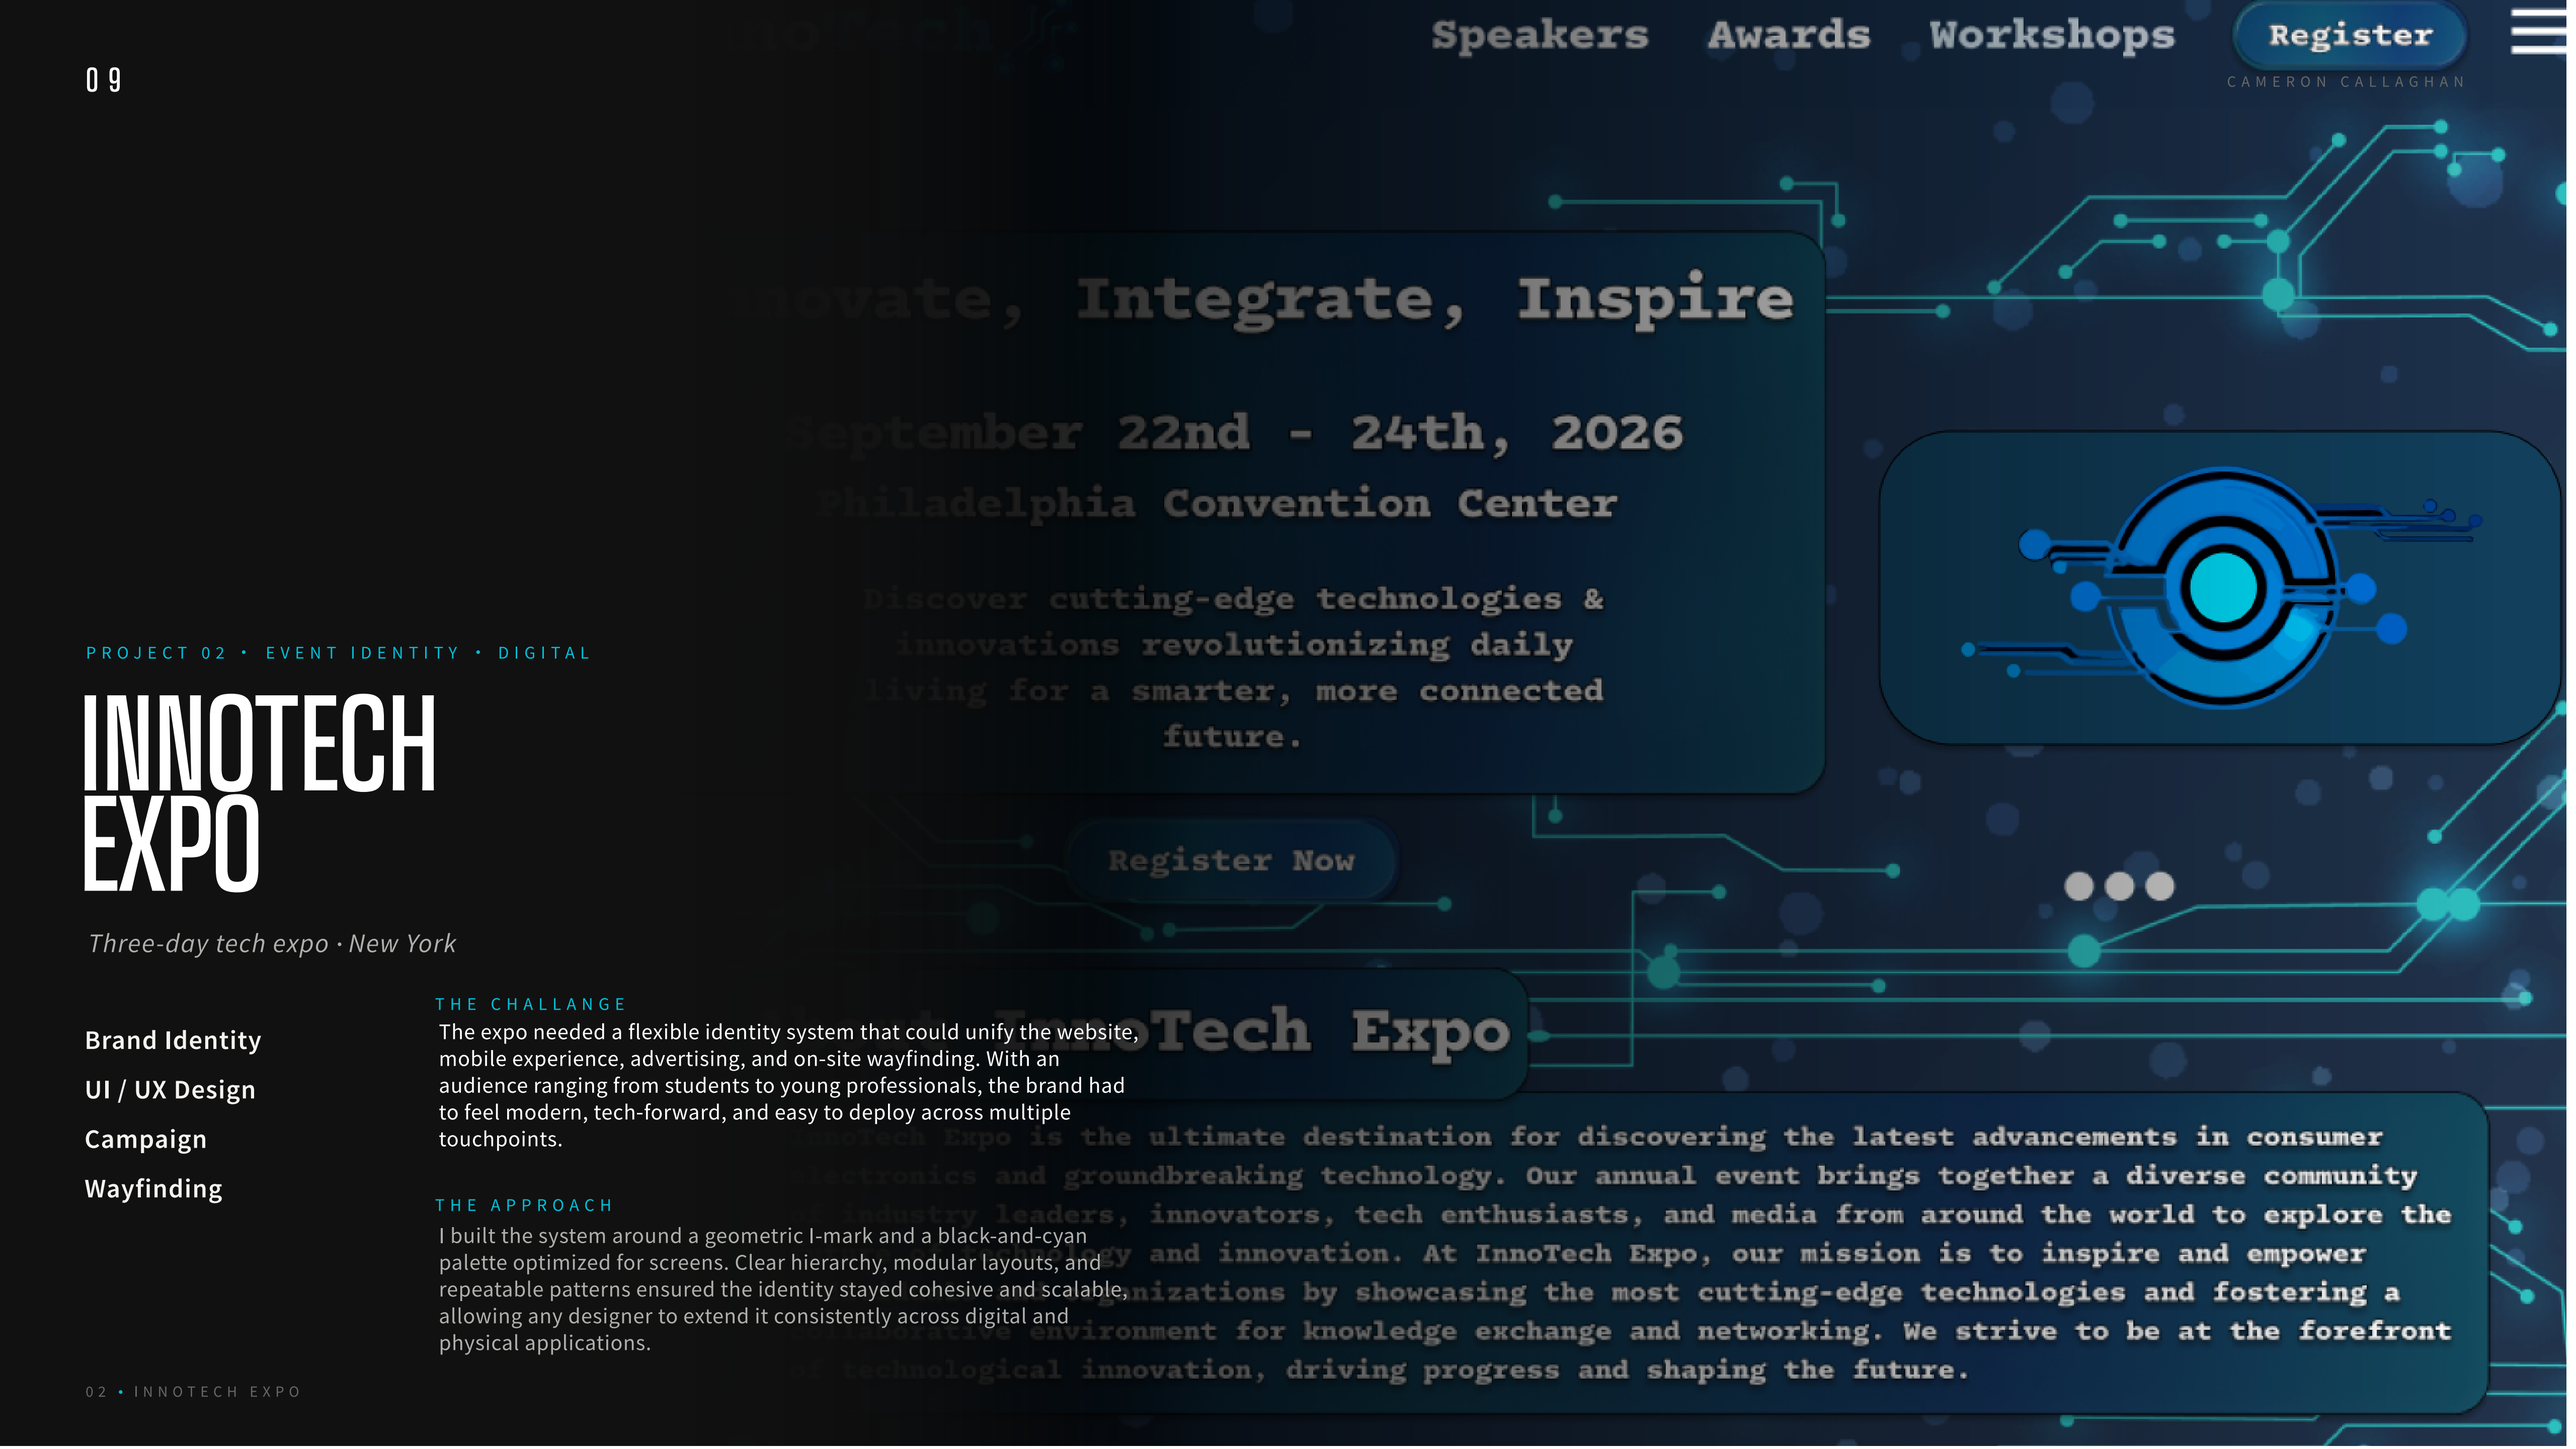
Wayfinding

THE CHALLANGE

The expo needed a flexible identity system that could unify the website, mobile experience, advertising, and on-site wayfinding. With an audience ranging from students to young professionals, the brand had to feel modern, tech-forward, and easy to deploy across multiple touchpoints.

THE APPROACH

I built the system around a geometric I-mark and a black-and-cyan palette optimized for screens. Clear hierarchy, modular layouts, and repeatable patterns ensured the identity stayed cohesive and scalable, allowing any designer to extend it consistently across digital and physical applications.



DESKTOP HIGH FIDELITY

One Interface, consistant everywhere

One language from phone to desktop. Visual consistency that reinforces instant recognition.

MOBILE

Medium fidelity - same system

CAMPAIGN

In-feed ads, keeping consistant across all screens.

Promotional material designed for Innotech Expo. These were poster ads that are seen more commonly on cell phones, tablets or any other small screen device you use.

THE CHALLANGE

Create a visual identity for a women's wrestling tournament that captures intensity, rivalry, and personality while staying polished enough for promotional graphics, event materials, and social content. The brand needed to elevate the athletes and make the tournament feel bold,competitive, and professionally produced.

THE APPROACH

Build a high-impact poster/ ad with a red/black systemV that matches the energy of the sport. Use dramatic athlete imagery, strong typographic hierarchy, and layered graphic elements to create promotional pieces that feel unified, powerful, and unmistakably part of the same event.

Create | Connect | Communicate

Poster Ad created for WWE NXT, advertising an upcoming match to viewers.

THE CHALLANGE

Build a memorable coffee identity that captures the energy and pursuit of excellence associated with “Olympic” without relying on obvious athletic imagery.

THE APPROACH

I translated ideas of competition, precision, and craftsmanship into a cohesive visual system designed to make Olympic Coffee feel distinctive, premium, and approachable across packaging and brand applications.
